

MURDERERS GOT THROUGH CORDON OF POLICEMEN

When Mr. Rosenheimer Was Killed Sleuths Were All Around the Place.

SCOTT WARNED THEM.

Yet the Two Yeggmen Got Off, Leaving Scarcely a Trace.

Capt. J. J. Rogers, the head of the Detective Bureau, at the urgent request of the police authorities of Mount Vernon and Pelham, sent two of his best men to Westchester to-day to work upon the Rosenheimer murder mystery.

In addition, Sheriff Lane, of Westchester County, has employed two experienced detective men, and the hunt for the murderers has been practically abandoned in the vicinity of the crime.

There is no doubt that the men who killed Mr. Rosenheimer were miles away from Pelham before the slaying of a man who could be described as a man of means. Two men answering the description of the murderers took a trolley car bound for New York at Mount Vernon about three-quarters of an hour after the crime. They got off at Woodlawn and struck out in the direction of Spoken. If they were the men wanted their intention undoubtedly was to reach the New York Central tracks and catch a northbound freight train.

John Hines and Patrick O'Flaherty, a couple of hoboes, who were found lurking about the railroad station at Pelham early to-day, were arrested on suspicion that they might know something of the Rosenheimer murder. They said that they had just come out from New York and there is nothing in their appearance to coincide with the descriptions of the two men who killed Mr. Rosenheimer. The police of Pelham are holding them until their story of their whereabouts on Tuesday night can be ascertained.

The theory that the murder was committed by regiments is advanced by the New York detectives. Undoubtedly the same two men who held up John Scott, the driver, in the rear of the Rosenheimer place a short time before the tragedy, killed Mr. Rosenheimer.

Wife's Story Not Helpful.

The aged wife of the murdered man has recovered from the shock of the tragedy and told the police what she saw of it to-day. Her story is not helpful. She can give no description of

BEST DESCRIPTION OF ROSENHEIMER'S SLAYERS.

One man was about thirty-five years of age. Five feet ten inches in height. Wore a light telescope hat. Had on dark suit. Had a sandy mustache.

Second man was about twenty-five years of age. Five feet six inches in height. Smooth face. Stockily built. Weight about 165 pounds. Wore black fedora hat.

the murderers, and is unable to tell what direction they took in making their escape.

As the case stands to-day, the police are utterly at sea. The only clue is the descriptions of the two men who held him up furnished by Scott. The different suspects held are not thought to have any knowledge of the murder, and will, it is said, be released soon.

The wealthy residents about Pelham and all that section of Westchester County are aroused over the crime. Sheriff Lane, who has taken up the hunt for the slayers with thirty deputies, has been told by the citizens and the Rosenheimer family to go ahead without thought of expense. The county officials will to-day, it is said, add $1,000 to the rewards now outstanding, bringing the total up to $7,500. The town of Pelham offers $500, while the family of the murdered man have posted an offer of $5,000 and are considering doubling it at once.

Police Near Where Murder Was Done

The sudden disappearance of the two thugs from the scene of their desperate work is puzzling the authorities. While they were beating down their victim in the vicinity of the crime was swarming with policemen searching for the men who had held up Scott. The policemen had notified the police as soon as he had escaped from the would-be robbers. Bluecoats were sent out immediately, and as Scott was attacked near the Rosenheimers' house, the officers hastened to that place.

Several of them heard Mrs. Rosenheimer's screams for help as she fell unconscious after seeing her husband struck down. They also heard Mr. Rosenheimer's son-in-law, James F. Curran, fire his revolver directly after the murder, and half a dozen were in the garden where the deed was done within a couple of minutes. Yet the murderers got away and hid their route.

Mrs. Charles Hegeman, who lives near the Rosenheimers, saw two men near the place about ten minutes after Rosenheimer was slain, and has given a description of them which is similar to that furnished by Scott. She says they were walking rapidly along in the rear of her house toward the New Haven Railroad tracks, and came from the direction of Rosenheimer's. There was a train leaving for this city in a few minutes, which the police now think they boarded.

The police have not found the slayer or other weapon with which the millionairess met his death. Three wounds were made on his head. Two seemed to have been struck with a stone or railroad spike tied to a short piece of rope, while the third, which was on the side of the head by the ear, might have been inflicted by a kick.

Had to Leave Victim in Hurry.

That the murderers were alarmed and left their victim quickly is proved by the money they left in Rosenheimer's pocket. One pocket was turned inside out, while in another was $5 in his hip pocket was $27 in bills and a commutation ticket. The men evidently were so rushed they only secured his watch and chain and possibly a little change. A broken section of the watch chain was found near the body, showing that in their haste the men had snatched the watch from his pocket and broke it loose from the chain, which had fallen near.

The watch was marked "J. T. R." and was an expensive gold timepiece. Chief Marks has had the local pawnshops notified, but has little hope this will do any good. If the men are old yeggmen they are too clever to take any chances now.

Sheriff Lane and Chief Marks had the little Hutchinson, which flows by "The Rosenheimers" dragged for the weapon which the slayers used, last evening.

Mrs. Rosenheimer is still very ill from the shock. She has been given her son-in-law, who is connected with the London Needle Company, of Manhattan, of which his father was President, a more connected story of the attack on her husband, but the facts are substantially the same as told before. She saw the two men in the dim light, and waited while Mr. Rosenheimer went to see what the men were doing in his grounds. Her description of them is very much like Scott's description of the men who attacked him.

Want More Policemen.

The people about Pelham and Mount Vernon are clamoring for more street lights at night and more policemen. They declare the police protection they get amounts to practically nothing.

Some of the Italians who worked for Mr. Rosenheimer have called at his home and asked to see his body. They shed tears when they stood before it, and prayed that suspicion might not fall on any of their number, saying he had treated them well and they loved him.

Charles Moore, who was arrested Tuesday night as a suspect, is held for examination this afternoon before Judge Ketchum. Chief Marks is investigating the story he tells of himself very fully, and it is said the Chief expects to know something that may be important before evening.

NEGRO SERVANT ATTACKS WOMAN IN HER BEDROOM

Held for Assault, West Indian May Face More Serious Charge.

Mrs. Marie Goss is still in a serious condition from the attack that was made on her at her home, No. 102 West Forty-seventh street, by Christopher Rogers, a West Indian negro, who was employed in her household. Rogers is held by the police under two charges made by Mrs. Goss. She is under the care of her physician, Dr. James J. Walsh, of No. 216 West Seventy-fourth street, and was unable to attend the hearing of the charges in the West Side Police Court.

Mrs. Goss keeps a lodging-house, and Rogers was one of the corps of negro servants employed by her. He had been in her employ about three weeks. She told the police that he had broken into her bedroom early Monday morning and made a vicious attack on her. She said she fought with him fully ten minutes before help came in response to her cries.

"I can never forget the horror of it all," said Mrs. Goss to-day. "I cannot banish the thought of the monster's black fingers at my throat. In those few minutes I think I must have lived years of terror, from the shock of which I fear I may never recover."

Owing to the large number of guests in her house Mrs. Goss has been sleeping in the front basement room. Six of the servants sleep in an extension at the rear of the basement floor, while Rogers slept in a small room nearer the one occupied by Mrs. Goss.

Mrs. Goss said it was her habit to lock the door of her bedroom at night, but on Friday last the key of her bedroom door disappeared. Sunday night she retired about 11 o'clock and was awakened, she said, about 1 A. M. Monday and saw the shadowy figure of a man in her room. She had left a light burning, but this the intruder had extinguished.

Screaming for Help. Before she could cry for help the man grabbed her. She rolled out of the bed and getting free screamed "Help! Murder!" The servants in the rear were too far away to hear her or paid no attention to the cries. She thought the man was a robber. She had $200 in cash on her person, which she told him to take; also her jewels, which were in a bag and hidden in the same place.

He paid no attention to her offer. Realizing then the purpose of the intruder, Mrs. Goss struggled harder than ever to get out of the room. She grabbed at the man's face and tore a mustache. In the struggle they got into a streak of light which came from the street and she saw her assailant was a negro.

All the time she was screaming for help. She figured that the struggle had lasted nearly ten minutes when a private watchman, passing in the street, heard her cries and began to hammer on the basement door. Her assailant darted out of the room. Mrs. Goss let in the watchman.

The police of the West Sixty-eighth street station arrested all of the seven servants, who were arraigned in the West Side Court Monday and all but Rogers were discharged. Rogers was the only one who wears a mustache. Being unable to go to court yesterday, the case was adjourned until to-morrow to give Mrs. Goss a chance to recover.

Iced Tea & Coffee

If you want to be cool and comfortable in the hottest weather, there is no beverage so soothing to the nerves or so refreshing to tired muscles as frequent sips of properly prepared iced tea. Often it quenches thirst and restores appetite in young and old as no other beverage can or will. Every housekeeper should have a supply of her favorite tea, all ready made and bottled in the ice-chest.

For the most delicious infusion of iced tea we confidently recommend BUTLER'S CEYLON GOLDEN TIPS. At 50c. a lb. it is the most economical, as you get the same strength by using half the quantity you would use of other teas. Steep for six minutes, and then pour into another vessel. After it is cool, place in a bottle or jar. By keeping it in the ice-box you have a supply of iced tea always ready for use, and in serving you can flavor with lemon or otherwise to suit individual tastes.

Coffee may be prepared and kept in the same manner, and for the iced beverage you will find nothing so satisfying as BUTLER'S OLD GOVERNMENT JAVA COFFEE.

Choicest Teas at 25c., 35c. and 50c. a lb. Choicest Coffees at 13c., 17c., 20c., 25c. and 30c. a lb.
